Co-Chair of Cannabis Taskforce Weighs-in on Compensation Trends for Cannabis Industry Workers

News
4.29.22

In an interview with New York Cannabis Insider, Catharine Morisset discusses salary trends for cannabis workers as New York State prepares to roll out its legal cannabis industry. During the interview, she draws from the industry experience in her home state of Washington, which has had a legal cannabis market for a decade. Catharine explains that jobs in Washington "....started off as just really getting minimum wage, and then as you saw higher end retailers – or those trying to be competitive – they moved to a minimum set wage plus tips." Catharine added that "[t]he cannabis industry appears to be delivering on jobs paying middle class wages comparable to industries like manufacturing, but doesn't require apprenticeships or long training processes."

To read the article visit New York Cannabis Insider (subscription required).

Please reach out to our Media team for any news inquiries.

Related People

Catharine Morisset
Partner
206.693.5076
Email

Copyright © 2024 Fisher Phillips LLP. All Rights Reserved.

Industry Focus

Cannabis

Related Offices

Seattle

Copyright © 2024 Fisher Phillips LLP. All Rights Reserved.