The article, “San Francisco Approves Six Weeks of Fully-Paid Parental Leave,” featured on RT, discussed how San Francisco has approved a measure making it the first city in the United States to require companies to offer six weeks of fully paid parental leave to their employees.

Jason Geller weighed in on employers passing the cost of the measure on to consumers.

"I am a business person and a resident of San Francisco, and I know that if they can pass on that expense, people will pay it,” said Jason. "We know that consumers in San Francisco will pay higher prices."
