ATLANTA & DENVER (January 18, 2008) - Fisher Phillips announces its expansion into Denver with the opening of a new office to be led by Partners Todd A. Fredrickson and Darin L. Mackender. Fredrickson and Mackender will join Fisher Phillips from Otten Johnson Robinson Neff + Ragonetti P.C. The effective date for their move is January 22, 2008. The two partners are joined by Associate Danielle S. Urban who is transferring from the Fisher Phillips office in Tampa.

Fisher Phillips Chairman Roger Quillen said, "We have wanted to expand into Denver for some time, but wanted to ensure we started out with the right attorneys. Todd and Darin are two of the most successful labor and employment attorneys in Colorado and they are the perfect complement to one of the nation's best group of labor and employment attorneys. Their addition to Fisher Phillips allows us to immediately start operations in Denver at the highest level."

Mr. Fredrickson said, "The move to Fisher Phillips allows us to be part of a firm with a single-minded focus on labor and employment law. Our current clients will benefit from the deep bench that the firm offers in all areas of the increasingly complex arena of labor and employment law."

Mr. Fredrickson will be the managing partner of the new Fisher Phillips' Denver office. He is one of a select group of Denver attorneys practicing traditional labor law. He represents companies in union campaigns, contract negotiations, grievance and arbitration, and unfair labor practice charges. Mr. Fredrickson also represents employers in matters arising under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of
