Houston Partner Shares Insights on Boosting Morale Amid the COVID-19 Pandemic

3.24.20

Employees are struggling to cope both at work and at home, leaving many employers to wonder if there’s anything they can do to boost the spirits of their workforce amid this public health crisis. In a conversation with Law360, Kevin Troutman explains that it is of vital importance for employers to regularly remind their workers that they are not facing this challenge alone. Kevin recommends that employers “constantly and calmly demonstrate that [they] share a common mission, which [they] will achieve, of taking care of each other while [they] work through these challenges together.”

To read the article, visit Law360 (subscription required).