

Rutgers Scandal Teaches that Harassment Policies Need Common Sense to Work

News

4.04.13

Asbury Park Press, Sunday Star Ledger and New Jersey 101.5 quoted New Jersey Partner David Strand in articles regarding the Rutgers harassment scandal. The articles addressed the recent Rutgers-Mike Rice scandal and how employers should be re-thinking their anti-harassment policies. David said that “what you see a lot of times is the employer making decisions not based on the facts, but (saying), ‘He’s my number one salesman.’ Do I have to get rid of my number one salesmen or can I send him to remediation?’ . . . You’ve got to do a thorough investigation and take prompt remedial action. What that prompt remedial action is the $64,000 question.”

Please reach out to our Media team for any news inquiries.

Related People

David E. Strand

Partner

908.516.1066

Email