Fisher Phillips announced the relocation of its Denver office to 1801 California Street. The firm will open at its new location on Monday, November 4, 2013.

A downtown Denver landmark, 1801 California is a 54-story, 1.3 million square foot office tower owned by Brookfield Office Properties. David Sternberg, senior vice president, Mountain Region, for Brookfield Office Properties said: "Brookfield is delighted that Fisher Phillips has chosen to be located at the newly-renovated 1801 California, which will feature a number of new amenities, including a restaurant concept from Chef Troy Guard, ink! Coffee and state of the art fitness and conference facilities. Fisher Phillips is a terrific organization we're happy to welcome to the group of preeminent firms moving into the property."

Fisher Phillips Denver Managing Partner Todd Fredrickson added: "Our move to 1801 California will accommodate the continued growth of our Denver office. That growth includes the addition of four attorneys from Stettner Miller effective November 1. Our clients expect and deserve excellent client service for their labor and employment matters and we are growing with attorneys who have the same commitment to client service that is a hallmark of Fisher Phillips."

The number of attorneys in Fisher Phillips' Denver office increased from six to ten with the addition of Bob Miller, Bruce Anderson, Sue Schaecher and Kate Raabe. The four had previously been with Denver law firm Stettner Miller, PC. Under Fredrickson's leadership the number of attorneys in Fisher Phillips' Denver office has grown from two to ten in the span of five years.

The firm's new address effective November 4, 2013 will be:

1801 California Street

Suite 2700
