Partner Tim Scott offers FOX 8's Morning Edition advice regarding office holiday parties

Scott explained how important it is for employers to give some serious thought to how they want to host a safe holiday party. They need to think about liability and risks they could face.

As an employee, it's very important to think of your career when you attend an office event.

"From an employee's perspective, nothing can kill a career more quickly than being the person who got way out of control during an office party," said Scott.

Scott also suggests having someone who will be a party monitor.
