Chris Mills was quoted on NJ 101.5 on November 25, 2014. The article “Survey: Quarter of US Workers Clock In on Major Holidays” discussed how an increasing number of people in the U.S. are working on the holidays to support their families, instead of spending time with them. Chris was quoted on the consequences employees face for failing to report to work on a scheduled day.

Chris said, “An employee is subject to discharge or discipline if they fail to show up on a day that they are scheduled to work, unless a religious reason is offered.”
