THE MORNING RISK REPORT: SUPREME COURT'S CATCH-22 FOR EMPLOYERS

News

Jun 2, 2015

Andrew Hoag was quoted in the Wall Street Journal on June 2, 2015. The article "The Morning Risk Report: Supreme Court's Catch-22 for Employers" discussed the Supreme Court's decision announced Monday in favor of a job applicant rejected by Abercrombie & Fitch Co. and how it poses a dilemma for employers.

They "are going to have to be extremely cognizant of the Catch-22 of this decision vs. the [ Equal Employment Opportunity Commission] prohibition and many states' prohibitions, on inquiring about religion," said Andrew.

The catch, said Andrew, is that "the employer should not inquire about religion but has to guard against a claim that a failure to hire was based on the motivation not to want to accommodate a religious belief."
