

Today's Student Activists: On Fire against a Gumbo of Issues

News

12.31.15

Scott Schneider was quoted in The Atlanta Journal Constitution on December 31, 2015. The article “Today’s Student Activists: On Fire against a Gumbo of Issues” discussed how Atlanta, the cradle of the civil rights movement that targeted racism, is now in the sway of a nationwide wave of student activism that has so much in its bull’s-eye, some have termed it a “gumbo” movement.

Scott was quote on his take of this new movement.

“It is ... this gumbo of issues,” said Scott.

Scott, 43, said students today respond more to social activism than he and his college contemporaries did.

“When I went to college, my concern was singular — get out of college and get a job,” he said. “This generation is growing up in the shadow of the Great Recession, and with a president who had his start in community activism.”

To read the full article, please visit AJC.

Please reach out to our Media team for any news inquiries.