In the article, "Lyft's $27M Driver Deal Hailed As Defense Against Future Suits," featured on Law360, Todd Scherwin discussed the underlying question that was not addressed in the Lyft case.

"The big question that's still out there is we've had these cases, but nothing is changing regarding the underlying classification of the drivers," said Todd. "There are some changes being put into place to make it look like these folks are independent contractors."
