The article, “Delicious Cases of Recipe Espionage: How to Protect Your Trade Secrets,” featured in All Business, examined three case studies of small-scale recipe espionage and offered advice on how to protect company trade secrets.

Mitch Baker provided advice on using confidentiality and non-disclosure agreements (NDA).

One of the most formidable resources at your disposal is a confidentiality agreement. Mitch recommended to be selective in what you include in an NDA, “Don’t say every bit of information you possess is confidential,” he urged, “It will be impossible to show that you’ve treated all that information as confidential”.
