The article, “With New Overtime Rules, Employers Face Tough Choices,” featured in Corporate Counsel, highlighted the U.S. Department of Labor’s new overtime rules and the challenges employers will face when trying to handle the imminent change.

John Thompson offered advice to employers on how to offset additional overtime pay.

Companies could approach the new rule by cutting worker pay to actually offset any additional overtime their employees might now be entitled to. “They might even have more part time employees,” said John. “There are all kinds of variables as to how this might play out.”
