

Judge Rejects Uber's $100 Million Class-Action Settlement, Calling it Unfair to Drivers

News
8.18.16

The article, "Judge Rejects Uber's $100 Million Class-Action Settlement, Calling it Unfair to Drivers," featured in the Los Angeles Times, highlighted Judge Chen's recent decision to reject Uber's proposed $100 million bid to settle a class-action lawsuit involving the employment status of drivers, describing the sum as "not fair, adequate, and reasonable."

Todd Scherwin discussed why the Judge's order could make a settlement unlikely.

"I don't want to say the settlement is dead, but it's pretty darn close," said Todd. "I'm not sure what dollar amount the court would be satisfied with."

To read the full article, please see the Los Angeles Times.

Please reach out to our Media team for any news inquiries.

Related People

Todd B. Scherwin
Regional Managing Partner
213.330.4450
Email

