The article, “Manual Del Empleado” Giving Headache to Businesses,” featured in Korea Daily, discussed why making an employee handbook in Spanish is not only complicated but expensive.

Soo-Young Park discussed why she strongly recommends business owners, who want to avoid potential legal actions, to provide company handbooks.

“Obviously, simply making and providing a handbook doesn’t solve every problem for employers,” she said. “They need to receive signatures from their employees, who must agree that they have fully read and understood what was stated in the book. It’s important that the business owners communicate the company’s regulations and policies clearly.”
