The article, “From Banking to Manufacturing, What Will Trump Win Mean for NC Businesses?” featured in The Charlotte Observer, highlighted some of the changes that could be in store for North Carolina businesses under a Donald Trump presidency.

Kevin Dalton discussed why employers should continue preparing for the new overtime rules set to go into effect on Dec. 1, in light of a federal lawsuit that could stop or delay rules.

Still, employers shouldn’t wait for the outcome of that hearing, according to Kevin.

“Nothing might change, and ... you might put yourself in a situation where you won’t have time to make the appropriate adjustments,” he said.

“Don’t speculate at this point that you don’t have to comply with these requirements.”
