In Kline School of Law's January edition of the Docket Newsletter, alumna Lauren Fuiman Cell is highlighted, recounting her journey from an indecisive student to a now promising employment law attorney.

“I came out of law school at a bad time for the economy. I positioned myself to have somewhat of a cushion when things were a little bit rocky,” Cell said, explaining her decision to take clerkships with the Superior Court in New Jersey and the U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania.
