In the article, "Will Trump Immigration Ban Affect Tech Skill Shortages at Your Company?" featured in Tech Republic, attorney Kim Thompson gives advice on what businesses should do following the Trump's immigration ban.

Kim Thompson, partner and chair of Fisher Phillips' Global Immigration Practice Group, said that employers should start by suspending international work travel for employees who are from one of the seven countries listed in the order.

"Similarly, you should encourage them to remain in the United States and to indefinitely postpone any personal travel plans outside of the United States if possible, even if they have a valid H-1B visa or green card," Thompson said.
