Attorneys Lauren Claycomb and Todd Logsdon were both quoted in the article, "Federal Agency Curbs Move In House But May Stall In Senate," featured in Business Insurance. They spoke on the Midnight Rules relief Act that has been stalled since Jan 5.

"Under the CRA, you can just introduce one rule at a time that you want to invalidate or overturn, but the Midnight Rules Relief Act would allow Congress to introduce a joint resolution that would address multiple rules so you can package multiple rules together and pass that through," said Lauren Claycomb.

"I'm just not sure how high it is on the Senate's list of priorities," Todd said. "They're trying to get some appointees confirmed. They're working on Affordable Care Act issues and other things that are probably higher on their list."
