

Bill On Part-Time Work Ignores Improving Economy

News

4.03.17

Assemblywoman Lorena Gonzalez Fletcher, D-San Diego, has introduced legislation to address what she says is the “troubling growth” of part-time workers in California. But federal and state labor data show that the number of involuntary part-time workers has been declining in recent years. If that’s the case, it is unclear why such a law is needed.

In the article, “Bill On Part-Time Work Ignores Improving Economy,” featured in The Sacramento Bee, Benjamin Ebbink discusses the issues revolving around the Assembly Bill 5 and its effect on the job market.
