

New York City Employers Won't Be Able To Ask For Your Salary History Anymore

News

5.04.17

Effective October 2017, employers in New York will no longer be allowed to ask applicants about their salary history. This new law aims to ensure pay equity across gender lines. In the article, "New York City Employers Won't Be Able To Ask For Your Salary History Anymore," featured in CNN, Partner Kathleen Caminiti encourages employers to review their hiring practices.

"This will require employers to change their job applications, employ new practices in terms of hiring, [and] retool how they engage in the salary discussions with prospective employees, focusing on salary expectations rather than current salary," said Kathleen.

To read the full article, please visit CNN.

Please reach out to our Media team for any news inquiries.

Related People

Kathleen McLeod Caminiti

Partner and Co-Chair, Wage and Hour Practice Group

908.516.1062

Email

Service Focus

Service Focus

Pay Equity and Transparency

Related Offices

New York