

Indian Firms Face Shifting Landscape as Trump Cracks Down on Immigration

News

5.07.17

As a result of President Trump's tighter restrictions on immigration, there are fewer U.S. work visas being applied for by Indian outsourcers. In the article, "Indian Firms Face Shifting Landscape as Trump Cracks Down on Immigration," featured in the Wall Street Journal, Shannon Stevenson explains the reason behind this decrease.

Indian companies that send tens of thousands of workers to the U.S. annually applied for fewer visas this year "due to the fear and uncertainty surrounding the Trump administration's stance on immigration," said Stevenson.
