Steven Bernstein was quoted in the article, "Trump NLRB Picks May Rein In Employee Speech," featured in Law360. According to the article, the NLRB has nominated a management-side labor attorney, which may signify the shift towards a more employer friendly board.

"We've had decision after decision go down against employers, probably at a clip of 90, 95 percent, sometimes in cases where an outsider looks at the facts and has a hard time reconciling them with the basic rule of common sense," Bernstein. "A lot of people are going to be watching this board and looking for the rule of reason to be written back into the law."
