Fisher Phillips, a national labor and employment law firm representing employers, announces the addition of Anthony Isola as an associate in its San Francisco office.

Isola defends employers in all types of employment litigation matters, including wage and hour, whistleblower, wrongful termination, discrimination, harassment, retaliation, breach of contract, defamation and unfair competition. He also advises employers regarding employee relations, employee leave laws, risk management and personnel policies and day-to-day strategic advice. Isola joins the firm from Louderback Law Group's San Francisco office.

"Anthony's strong background working on wage and hour matters, combined with his real estate and construction law experience, will be a great asset for our clients in a variety of industries," said Jason Geller, managing partner of the firm's San Francisco office. "He possesses an impressive set of litigation skills, which will complement our team and best service our clients."

Isola previously served as an associate with Smith Dollar PC in Santa Rosa, handling real estate and financial services litigation matters. He serves as vice chair of the Bar Association of San Francisco's Barristers Labor and Employment Section. During law school, Isola served as a law clerk for the Honorable A. James Robertson II of the San Francisco Superior Court and for the San Francisco District Attorney's Office. He was selected to Northern California Super Lawyers "Rising Stars" list for 2017.

Isola earned his J.D. from the University of California, Hastings College of Law (2010) and his B.S. from the University of California, Santa Barbara (2007).
