In the article, "New Managing Partner Named at Fisher Phillips," the Chicago Daily Law Bulletin reported on the planned transition of Regional Managing Partners in the Chicago office from Craig Annunziata to Steve Miller. In this article, Miller described a few ways in which he aspires to elicit firm growth under his leadership in the coming years.

"We certainly have different management styles but generally speaking, we have a great office and great people," he said. "We'll see how things progress and if we need to make changes, we'll make necessary changes. But as of now, I think we're fine and we're in great shape."

"In terms of potential areas of focus with the office, one thing we might look at is increasing our footprint in the traditional labor field in the Chicago office," he said.
