Alden Parker is quoted in the SFGATE article “Does Your Job Make You Sign a 'Love Contract'? The Complications of Dating in the Tech Bubble.” He says it is not unusual for companies, particularly large ones and those in tech, to have policies clarifying the rules on relationships between coworkers.

“A manager might think they’re in a consensual dating relationship and the subordinate doesn’t feel the same way,” Alden added. “Sometimes the breakups are ugly and accusations get thrown around, and whether they’re true or not, companies are going to be held to high standards for the actions of their supervisors.”
