

Attorney Comments on How Google Pay Equity Case May Be Blueprint for Class Actions

News

4.03.18

Megan Winter was quoted in the article “Google Pay Equity Case May Be Blueprint for Class Actions” that was published in Law 360. California Superior Court Judge Mary Wiss’s decision to deny Google, Inc.’s attempt to trim the suit will possibly provide insight in the future for plaintiffs in other class lawsuits. In this article, Megan emphasized the future effects of this decision, saying that “the judge cited to several allegations that the plaintiffs had made about the use of prior salary in setting current compensation. That really provided a roadmap for many other employees to state these types of claims, as that’s a fairly common business practice.”

For the full article, visit Law 360. (Subscription required)

Please reach out to our Media team for any news inquiries.

Related People

Megan C. Winter

Partner

858.597.9622

Email