The SHRM article “California’s New Contractor Test Will Impact the Gig Economy” goes into detail about the new three-part ABC Test that defines three factors that a worker must meet to be qualified as a contractor. Todd Scherwin comments on Prong A and B, saying that businesses have always understood that their control over the work being done is subject to scrutiny, but that Prong B is the big change that employers need to be mindful of. Sean Kingston also comments that “there are a number of industries where the relationship between a worker and a company traditionally has been an independent contractor.”
