Memphis, Tenn. (Oct. 5, 2018) – Fisher Phillips, a national labor and employment law firm representing employers, announces that J. Gregory Grisham has joined its Memphis office as Of Counsel.

Prior to joining Fisher Phillips, Grisham was an attorney in the Memphis and Nashville, Tennessee, offices of FordHarrison. Grisham has more than 25 years of experience counseling and representing employers in all aspects of workplace law. He has specifically focused on preventative practices to help employers avoid claims, charges and has extensive successful experience defending employers in a full range of employment and related lawsuits, charges and claims.

“Greg brings extensive experience in creating preventive workplace solutions for clients and, when necessary, litigating successfully on their behalf,” said Memphis Regional Managing Partner David Jones. “He is a terrific addition to our team in Tennessee and we expect clients to benefit immediately from the experience he brings.”

Grisham has been recognized by Best Lawyers in America in the area of labor and employment litigation, as well as by Mid-South Super Lawyers, in addition to being selected as a Fellow in the College of Labor and Employment Lawyers. He is serving as immediate past chair of the Tennessee Bar Association’s Labor and Employment Section.

Grisham received his law degree with honors from the University of Memphis School of Law, his MBA from the University of Mississippi and his undergraduate degree from the University of Tennessee at Chattanooga.
