Roger Quillen spoke with the Daily Report regarding the legal developments in labor and employment law that fueled growth for Fisher Phillips in 2018. He said: "The firm has been very busy in states with aggressive enforcement regimes, because the federal regulatory framework for labor and employment issues continues to lag. New laws and regulation around gender pay equity and medical and recreational marijuana have also created new work." Additionally, the Daily Report identified the firm's expansion in the Washington, D.C. metro market and its investment in technology as a strategic move to provide key services to clients.
