

Insights, News & Events

BLOOMBERG INTERVIEWS ATTORNEY ON TENNESSEE'S NEW WORKPLACE BULLYING IMMUNITY LAW

News
Apr 24, 2019

Tennessee Gov. Bill Lee signed into law legislation that would offer employers immunity from workplace-bullying lawsuits if they adopt the state's model anti-bullying policy. The law, HB 856, expands the state's Healthy Workplace Act to include private employers. "The immunity would apply only to general abusive conduct litigation filed in state court, but employers could still face lawsuits alleging mistreatment based on a worker's race, gender, or other federally protected class," Memphis partner Courtney Leyes told Bloomberg Law. "The measure could encourage smaller and midsize employers to adopt anti-bullying policies," she added.

To read the full article, visit Bloomberg Law (subscription required).

Related People

Courtney Leyes

Partner

615.488.2902

Related Offices

Memphis

Nashville