Kathleen Caminiti and Cheryl Pinarchick, co-chairs of Fisher Phillips' national pay equity practice spoke at the 2019 Association of Corporate Counsel Annual Meeting on effective strategies for GCs to implement to promote gender and pay equality. In media coverage of the panel, Bloomberg Law and Law360 identified that general counsel and other in-house lawyers are crucial corporate players in helping to set the proper tone at the top to show that their companies are serious about eliminating harassment in the workplace. Cheryl said: "It's clear that we need to actively, effectively, consistently combat sexual harassment in the workplace, and that's essential. It's also clear that some of the old, traditional ways that we have done this for years and years and years just [aren't] working, because the problem keeps persisting."
