Charles Caulkins, a partner in the firm's Fort Lauderdale office, recently spoke with South Florida Business and Wealth about his goals for the Florida Chamber under his leadership as chairman. He explained that the state is in a unique position to work through the Chamber's 39 specific types of goals that will help Florida remain successful for the future. Among them, Charles says, are improving elementary reading levels, raising the bar for amending the state constitution, decreasing poverty levels, and increasing vocational education.
