

Safety & Health Guidance For Responding To And Cleaning Up After A Hurricane

Publication

9.04.12

The Occupational Safety & Health Administration (OSHA) expects employers to adhere to consensus standards even in the face of disruption because of a hurricane or other severe weather. In order to be in compliance of these standards after a hurricane, it is important that employers remain aware of OSHA's expectations and utilize the various available compliance assistance resources in order to maintain a safe workplace.

Related People

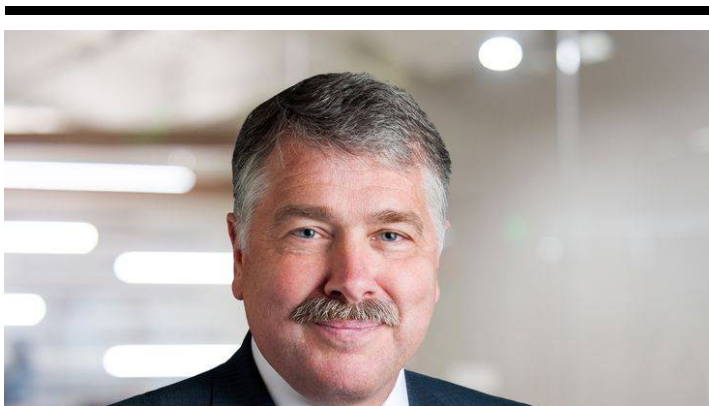

Edwin G. Foulke, Jr.

Partner

404.240.4273

Email

Howard A. Mavity

Partner

404.240.4204

Email