

Texas Employers Must Avoid Knee-Jerk Reactions to Employee Mask Objections

Publication

7.22.20

The COVID-19 pandemic remains a very serious issue for Texas employers, and many are now insisting that employees wear masks. But how should employers handle situations in which employees object to wearing a mask? In his bylined article published by Law360, Steve Roppolo explains that Texas employers should avoid knee-jerk reactions to employee mask objections and engage in a meaningful discussion on a case-by-case basis. Steve provides a key set of questions that employers should ask to determine how the request can be properly handled to both avoid potential liability while keeping that employee – and all other employees – safe.

To read the full article, visit Law360 (subscription required).

Related People

Stephen J. Roppolo
Regional Managing Partner
713.292.5601
Email

Related Offices

