

Sometimes (Especially in California), the Wrong Shoes Can Really Cost You

Publication

2.17.14

A Workplace Safety and Health Law Blog post by Howard Mavity was featured on TLNT.com.

Warehouses and distribution centers (DC's) are not the Occupational Safety and Health Administration's most frequently inspected workplaces and do not present the complex compliance issues presented by some manufacturers or refineries, Howard wrote.

But that does not mean that a OSHA inspection will not result in citations and dangerous Repeat exposure, or costly abatement actions, he explained. Distribution centers are a great example of employers who may not realize that OSHA's evolving enforcement positions have upped their legal exposure and may catch them out of compliance.

Read Howard's full blog post.

Related People

Howard A. Mavity

Partner

404.240.4204

Email