

Law Week Colorado Interviews Regional Managing Partner About Denver Office Move

News
7.08.20

Fisher Phillips announced that its Denver office moved to the city's Central Business District and doubled its physical footprint with 20,235 square feet of new space. Regional Managing Partner, Mike Greco, discussed the move in a feature interview with Law Week Colorado in which he explained that the office's recent growth trajectory was the driving force behind the move.

The article explains some of the unique circumstances presented by the COVID-19 pandemic and points out the fact that the enlarged footprint makes social distancing easier which has made it safer for employees to return to the office. The piece goes on to describe additional safety measures that have been adopted by the firm as well as some other considerations as the office adjusts to the "new normal" of the post pandemic world.
