

Facial Analysis Technology in the Workplace Brings Risks

News

7.09.20

In a recent interview with SHRM, Monica Snyder shares insight on the legal risks with implementing facial analysis and artificial intelligence in the workplace. She recommends that employers tread carefully on how they use this technology. Monica explains that states like Illinois, Maryland, California and New York have either placed restrictions on the use of this technology for evaluating job candidates or are considering legislation that will do so. In Illinois specifically, the state's Artificial Intelligence Video Interview Act requires that companies using the technology to notify applicants in advance.

To read the full article, visit SHRM.

Please reach out to our Media team for any news inquiries.

Related People

Monica Snyder Perl

Partner

617.532.9327

Email

Service Focus

Privacy and Cyber

