In an interview with Hotel News Now, Andria Ryan shares her thoughts on what the U.S. hotel industry can expect from the Biden administration with regard to workplace laws over the next four years. Andria explains that the Biden administration will likely come in with union-friendly policies and that there will likely be an increase in union organizing in service-related industries such as health care and hospitality. Because of the pandemic, she wants that this uptick is going to converge at a really bad time for hospitality employers.
