NEW YORK (February 24, 2021) – Fisher Phillips, one of the country’s preeminent labor and employment law firms representing employers, announces the addition of Amanda Blair as an associate in the firm’s New York office.

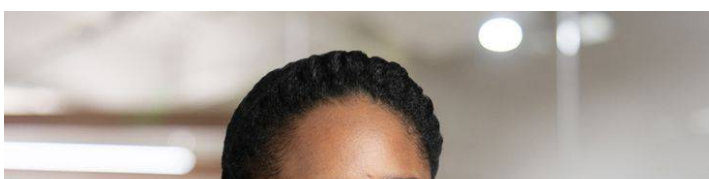

Blair joins from the New York City Law Department where she served as Assistant Corporation Counsel in the Labor and Employment Division. In this capacity she acted as defense counsel during New York State Division of Human Rights public hearing conducting directs and crosses for multiple witnesses. Blair also handled all stages of discovery, drafted subpoenas, and prepared witnesses for deposition. Additionally, she has written more than 30 dispositive motions. At Fisher Phillips Blair will leverage her experience working with a large complex organization to counsel and defend clients against matters involving Title VII, the Americans with Disabilities Act, the First Amendment, the Age Discrimination in Employment Act, the Family Medical Leave Act and New York’s state and city human rights laws.

Of Blair’s arrival, Michael Marra, co-Regional Managing Partner of Fisher Phillips’ New York City office says: “with the rapid changes in local, state and federal employment laws, we are seeing an uptick in demand for labor and employment counsel for our clients in New York and across the Tri-state area. Adding Amanda, who has first chair experience and the proven ability to take charge of matters from the outset to conclusion, expands our team’s depth and reinforces our presence here in New York. We are pleased to welcome her to our team.”

Blair earned her J.D. from Temple University Beasley School of Law and her B.A., cum laude, from Lehigh University.
