

SHRM Talks to Fisher Phillips About DOL's Delay of Independent Contractor Rule

News
3.04.21

In an interview with SHRM, Rich Meneghello shares his insights on the fact that the U.S. Department of Labor (DOL) has delayed a final rule clarifying who is an independent contractor versus an employee under the Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA). Rich says that he is not surprised by the delay given that the new administration asked federal agencies to freeze pending regulations to give new leaders time to review them. He goes on to explain that DOL may even withdraw the rule given President Biden's campaign pledge to work with Congress to establish a new federal standard similar to California's "ABC" test for classifying workers as independent contractors. And, if DOL does withdraw the prior administration's rule, then Rich predicts that litigation will likely follow as business groups may challenge the decision.

To read the article visit SHRM (subscription required).

Please reach out to our Media team for any news inquiries.

Related People

Richard R. Meneghello
Chief Content Officer
503.205.8044
Email

Related Offices

Portland, OR