

Workplace Super Bowl Fever: What Employers Should Know

Publication

2.03.16

Todd Fredrickson's article "Workplace Super Bowl Fever: What Employers Should Know" was featured in the Denver Business Journal on February 3, 2016.

Orange and blue is everywhere, rallies are happening downtown, and Bronco Fever has ramped up as the city, and nation, get set for the Denver Broncos vs. the Carolina Panthers in Super Bowl 50 on Sunday.

For employers, this can be a trying time: you want to accommodate your employees' excitement and even join in. But, with customers to be served or products to be manufactured, how do you strike a balance between accommodating contagious team spirit and maintaining productivity among your workforce? The biggest game of the year will definitely impact your workplace, especially today and even after game day.

In the article, Todd provides employers advice on what they need to know about the Super Bowl, regarding the following topics in the workplace:

- Productivity Issues
- Dress Code
- Gambling at Work: Is it Legal?
- Monday's Super Bowl Hangover

To read the full article, please visit Denver Business Journal.

Related People

Todd A. Fredrickson

Partner

303.218.3650

Email