It's often said that doing business in California is like doing business in an entirely different country, and the state's response to the pandemic is no exception to this rule. In this podcast, California attorneys Ben Ebbink and Hannah Sweiss discuss the most pressing issues they have seen from clients and California employers related to COVID-19. They will discuss questions about international travel, employers' new obligations, and recent legislation affecting California employers from a federal, state, and local level.
