

Co-Chair of Firm's Labor Relations Talks to Forbes About the PRO Act

News
3.24.21

In an interview with Forbes, Todd Lyon shares his thoughts on how the Protecting the Right to Organize (PRO) Act might impact millions of independent contractors and self-employed small businesspeople. The article explores how the legislation could potentially clash with existing laws and breaks down the existing relationship between independent contractors and unions. While its ultimate impact is unknown, Todd explains the current balance between the National Labor Standards Act and long-standing antitrust legislation that would prevent independent contractors in a union to run afoul of issues like price-fixing if the PRO Act were to pass.

To read the article visit Forbes.

Please reach out to our Media team for any news inquiries.

Related People

Todd A. Lyon
Partner and Labor Relations Group Co-Chair
503.205.8095
Email

Service Focus

Labor Relations

Related Offices

Portland, OR