Social justice issues are affecting American workplaces more than ever and raise a number of day-to-day and systemic workplace issues. Companies are likely struggling to answer the following questions:

- How should employers address employee conduct relating to political and social justice issues in the workplace?
- How should employers address employee off-duty conduct or action on social media?
- Should employers be agents for change in driving diversity initiatives, and if so, what can they do?
- What are the challenges and risks to companies in addressing social justice issues?

Join Fisher Phillips attorneys Margaret Scheele and Sarah Biran for an informative webinar discussing these important issues.

Fisher Phillips clients and friends of the firm are invited to attend as our guests. If you are interested, please contact Donna Kearney for your complimentary registration.
