

New York City Employers, Beware: Worker Protection Bills on Tap for 2017

Publication

12.13.16

In the article, "New York City Employers, Beware: Worker Protection Bills on Tap for 2017," featured on Lexology, Attorney Melissa Osipoff discusses six bills, introduced to the City Council on December 6, 2016, which strive to give retail and fast food employees more notice of and predictability in their schedules, while compensating them with extra pay for last-minute schedule changes.

She expects some of these bills to pass and become effective in 2017. She discusses the impact on:

- Retail employees
- Fast Food employees
- All employees

To read the full article, please visit Lexology.

Related People

Melissa Camire

Partner

212.899.9965

Email

Related Offices

New York