

Bloomberg Businessweek Taps Fisher Phillips Workplace Safety Co-Chair for Insight on Forthcoming Federal Emergency COVID Rules

News
4.12.21

Travis Vance, co-chair of Fisher Phillips' Workplace Safety and Catastrophe Management practice, interviewed with Bloomberg Businessweek on forthcoming federal emergency COVID rules. It appears that the federal Occupational Safety and Health Administration is preparing to issue new short-term regulations to protect workers from catching COVID-19 on the job. Travis anticipates that the federal rules may look a lot like Virginia's OSHA rules and says employers will likely see a stringent face-covering requirement and requirements that employees have free access to the vaccine.

To read the article visit Bloomberg Businessweek.

Please reach out to our Media team for any news inquiries.

Related People

Travis W. Vance
Regional Managing Partner
704.778.4164
Email

Service Focus

Workplace Safety and Catastrophe Management

Related Offices

Charlotte