

How Texas Employers Can Support Employees During Significant Weather Events

Publication

4.19.21

In an article published in Medical Journal Houston, Steve Roppolo talks about how significant weather events are a good time for employers to demonstrate that they are not only good corporate citizens but that they care about their own people and are taking steps to make things easier on them. He uses the state's recent "snowmageddon" experience to discuss some of the employment challenges companies should be ready to face when the next significant weather event impacts their workforce. Steve also provides some considerations for employers as they plan for these significant weather events in order to be ready to support their employees and operate as smoothly as possible under whatever difficult circumstances Mother Nature sends their way.

To read the article visit Medical Journal Houston.

Related People

Stephen J. Roppolo

Partner

713.292.5601

Email

Industry Focus

Healthcare

Related Offices

Houston