

Bringing Telemedicine to the Workplace: What Employers Should Know

Publication

8.08.17

Partner Jeff Smith authored the article, "Bringing Telemedicine to the Workplace: What Employers Should Know." The article, which appeared August 8 in Akron Legal News, defines telemedicine and the legal risks that it may impose on employers.

"If you're like most people, you don't enjoy sitting in a doctor's office with other coughing and sneezing people while waiting for your appointment, or wasting half a day just to get a prescription refilled.

The concept of telemedicine is growing in popularity because it can make routine medical care easier to access and less expensive.

But although it can be a great solution, employers are often unaware of the legal risks associated with introducing telemedicine to the workplace."

To read the full article, please visit Akron Legal News.

Related People

Jeffrey D. Smith

Partner

440.838.8800

Email

