In their article published by ACC Georgia, Rick Grimaldi, Jennifer Sandberg and Terri Stewart explore the ways in-house counsel can navigate disruption in the workplace to attract and retain talent. Given the massive changes in the way people work, live, play and socialize, they say in-house counsel must be able to make sense of all the moving parts and help their organizational leaders navigate the serious changes that will continue to impact the workplace. In the article, they outline five trends that in-house counsel should be on the lookout as the future unfolds, including: worker safety, mental health, gig economy and artificial intelligence.
